WHEELING, FEBRUARY 18, 1893.

An Infant Poet.

This is an age of infant prodigies, and scarcely a day passes without witnessing the discovery of some new child wonder. The stage is full of them and almost all the modern dramas contain a part for some precocious youngster who has developed a talent far beyond her or his years. The literary field, also, is very productive of infant prodigies just now, and American journalistic or poetical talent is being developed in the nursery. In some cases it shows up in a remarkable way. The latest discovery in this line is due to the enterprise of the New York World. That wide-awake journal recently introduced to the American public, in a lengthy article her wonderful genius, a exploiting poetess only ten years of age, in the person of Miss Lillian Horner, of that

The specimens of the child's work presented in the article, which was reprinted in the INTELLIGENCER, Were above the average and the modest little lady who is still playing with her dolls in the nursery all at once found herself famous. It seemed almost incredible that one of such tender years should have genius developed enough to write the lengthy poem of which the following is a sample verse:

Dance, shadows, dance to us, bow to us so, Come as we come to you, go when we go, Grow big and little, grow short and grow tall. You shadows that live on the side of the wall.

It is no ordinary child's jingle but would do credit to an older head. But there is something else about this tenyear-old wonder with whom the World has astonished literary circles, which would also do credit to an older and shrewder head, and that is the bold manner in which she has succeeded in pulling the wool over the eyes of her credulous admirers.

The fond father, whose heart beat with pride when he saw his tot's picture printed in a great newspaper along with a number of her wonderful productions and an interview with ber, will doubtless bound up stairs two steps at a time, enter that nursery and, with the aid of her mamma's slipper, engender in the prodigy's soul a sort of feeling which is quite the opposite of that inspired by poetic genius, when he learns what a cunning little fakir she is,

There is a young man in Wheeling, Mr. C. Q. Rawling, by name, who read the Intelligencer's extract from the World and was struck with profound admiration for the little genius. But he has some literary taste and reads poetry when it is worth reading, and remembers it. So when he scanned the samples of the child wonder's remarkable work his admiration vanished. for there was a strange inmiliarity about some of the lines. One little poem, which Miss Horner tells the World is the best she has written, her father being the hero, he remembered having read years ago, when quite a small lad himself. He looked over his files of Golden Days, and there he found it printed under date of November 3, 1883, when the child poet was only three months old. The author is Robert Richardson, B. A., a writer of some distinction. The young man sends the paper to the INTELLIGENCER that it may see for itself. The poem will be remembered because of the humorous manner in which it describes the heroic conduct of a man in taking a dose of easter oil.

The infant prodigy must not be discouraged over this exposure. Older poets than she have gained fame in this way, but they have been shrowd enough not to be found out. Even the great Shakespeare rests under suspicion in some people's minds.

An Awful Possibility.

Democrats are borrowing lots of trouble on account of the selection of Judge Gresham for the cabinet. They reason it out this way: Suppose Cleveland and Stevenson should both diesuch a thing might occur, then under the law the secretary of state would become President and we would have a Republican in the white house after all,

The New York Sun thus tearfully alludes to the awful possibility:

Consider this as a result of the Democratic victory of whose importance Mr. Cleveland spoke so impressively at limital O one life, that of Adia E. Stövenson, fortunately a good risk, between the life of Grover Cleveland and President Walter Q. Gresham, the voleran stalwart Republican and Grant third-termer, of whom no man, with the possible exception of Mr. Cleveland, can after the has become a Democrat, or is not still a Republican.

The more Democrats think about the mess Mr. Cleveland has made of the "great Democratic victory" of last Nevember, the warmer they get, and the more they realize that it wasn't their victory at all, but a personal triumph for Mr. Grover Cleveland, Mugwump, for Mr. Grover Cleveland, Mugwamp.
What more could they expect after died in Salisbury, Mo., and when the nominating a man wholly on the grounds that he was "better than his party?" The words of Bourke Cockran at Chicago loom up before their eyes like a spectre. Bourke may not be much of a moralist, but he is something of a prophet.

Religion and Art. Out in Edgerton, Wisconsin, one Rev erend Mr. Newton, an evangelist hailing from California, has been holding a successful revival. He has converted pretty nearly all the hardened wretches in the community, including two brothers named Sampson, who are owners of a large pottery, and thereby hangs a tale:

These Sampson brothers had a contract to supply figures for decorative purposes at the World's Fair. Many of the figures and groups of figures had been completed and were ready for shipment to Chicago, there to delight the artistic senses of the millions of people who are going to visit the big show. Some of the figures were nude and others dressed in the scantiest of summer attire. Still others were moderately clothed, as if they were intended to represent members of the four-hundred arrayed for a fashionable ball.

In the course of time Evangelist Newton visited his two converts at their works, and was inexpressibly shocked at the appearance of the undraped figures. He didn't go into a long discussion of the much debated question of the nude in art. He just firmly announced to the innocent Sampson brothers that it was very displeasing to the Lord for them to make images of the human form divine clothed only in nature's garb, even for decorative pur-

The Sampson brothers were sincere in their profession of religion, and were astounded at the good man announcement. However, they regarded him as one who spoke by authority, and in less time than it takes to tell it all the Venuses and Appollos, the Gladiators, and Disk Throwers were shattered to pieces. It is said that the ruined casts represented thousands of dollars, besides a broken contract with the World's Fair. The well meaning but meddlesome evangelist did not escape censure, however, for worldly people grew indignant and served notice on him to confine his labors to saving souls, while the Sampson brothers have repented of their haste and are not so charmed with the peculiar doctrine laid down to them as they were.

Evangelist Newton may be a good man, but his style of work lacks common sense, which is as necessary in religion as in worldly matters.

THE newspapers are kept busy informing an inquiring public who Hoke Smith is. Several of them have gone to the expense of printing diagrams of him in order that there may be no mistake, and at last the great, throbbing heart of the nation is pulsating with the proud feeling that they are able to locate Cleveland's secretary of the interior. Few of them ever heard of Hoke Smith before Mr. Cleveland discovered him, but, thanks to the enterprise of the press, they know him now.

The would-be assassin who is pursuing Captain L. D. Sine to poison him evidently doesn't know the captain. He isn't the sort of a man to let amusements of that nature go unnoticed, and cannot be fooled with poisoned cheese and "fixed" alcohol. We predict that if Captain Sine ever gets his hands on his reckless enemy the latter will find the West Virginia climate very unhealthful.

It is hoped that the expected opposition to the appropriation of $25,000 additional to secure an adequate exhibit of West Virginia's resources at the World's Fair will not develop much strength. The appropriation is not only desirable but necessary. It would be a shame and a disgrace to the state to defeat it. Let the legislature keep step to the music of the march of pro-

Ir is not probable that the "Jim Crow" car bill before the legislature will become a law. There are some Democrats, even, who think that race race projudice and rank partisianism can be carried too far.

CERTAIN Democratic politicians of Webster county are wiser if not better than they were before they attempted to persuade Miss Kate Arthur, postmistress at Addison, to make a combine with them.

LATE advices from Washington indicate that the senate will confirm the Hawaiian treaty regardless of Mr. John O. Pendieton's protest.

When the cabinet assembled, just prior to Thanksgiving, President Har-rison read the Thanksgiving proclama-tion. The members of cabinet thought he read it to show how eloquent he could be, because it was an unusual thing for him to do so. Since I prepared it I have re-ceived the report of the secretary of agriculture, and I am not sure that I ought not to include him with the Almighty."

THE KANSAS WAR.

It is Un-American. New York World (Den.)

New York World (Dea.)

If the antagonism between the rival lower houses of the Kansas legislature comes to an actual conflict of arms it will be a burning disgrace. There are courts in that state competent to determine all the questions that have arisen, or, if they are incompetent under the statutes, it is competent for the parties to the controversy to establish a judicial commission which shall decide the matters in issue, and by whose decision all, by agreement, shall abide. We want no Central American revolutions in this country. We want no political lynch law. It is not the way in these United States. It cannot be justified on any grounds. The party which attempts it will be wrecked, whether it wins or loses. It can much better afford to suffer injustice for the present. Time will right all wrongs. Americans believe in order: they do not believe in believe in order; they do not believe in

Covered With Disgrace. New York Press (Rep.)

That the Republican legislators have been subjected to gross injustice is manifest from the fact that part of the militia of the state refused to obey the mandate ordering it out. Large bodies of mili and railway employes evince a willingness to sustain the Republican house against the militia. Such a feeling would hardly exist if it was not felt that the Republican contention was right. The whole situation is most deplorable. While it continues the fair name of Kansas is covered with discrete.

Something to Learn.

New York Advertiser (Rep.)

The populist governor of Kansas seems to be a man of large functions. He has undertaken, it appears, to decide who are the properly qualified members of the legislature in his state and is ready, as the sovereign ruler of a sovereign state, to enforce his decision by use of the state militia. There are a great many quite valuable and useful things to know which Governor Lewelling seems to be in a fair way to learn at an early day.

Spasmodic Kansas. Chicago Mall (Den.)

Kansas has always been conducting a species of legislative St. Vitus' dance. Yesterday it did its regular spasm under Marquis of Queensberry rules. One hunk of bleeding Kansus politicians met another gob of bloody Kansus politicians and proceeded to perform a jerky ghost dance on what remnants of reputation the state had left. The question there has passed the partisan stage—it's now a matter of decency. , #### Deluded Populists.

New York Times (Dem.) The American farmer has been regarded as in the main a man of sense and of honesty, and yet in Kansas, under the stress of real or fancied wrong in the workings of the government, he has been carried away by delusion and demagogy into acts of strange folly and lawlessness. The excesses at Topeka are likely to bring about a reaction which will restore his sanity.

Revolutionists. Philadelphia Inquirer (Rep.)

One thing is certain, the Populists have throughout the controversy acted in the most arbitrary manner and seem to have no regard whatever for law or precedent. If they expect to appeal to the nation four years hence on the same lines as carried out in Kansa; this win-ter they had better indorse anarchy at once.

A Prevalent Disease.

Pittiburgh Dispatch (Ind.).

For a man, all the anxiety of business, the weight of care, the gloom and depression of spirits are dispersed as clouds by the sun before the bright smile of a joyous, happy wife.

And it follows no less surely that a cross woman, one never pleased, atways fault-finding discontented and unhappy, will repel all who approach her, and make those who should love her shrink from her society. Now, the first requisite of good nature is good health. No one out of health can have bound-ing spirits and feel particularly good-natured.

If a woman feels nervous weak, tired, languid, lifeless and miserable, experiences a faintness, sense of fulness after eating, has irregular appe-(i.e. constipated bowels, frequent headaches wakeful or disturbed and unrefreshing sleep, weak back, backache, dragging down pains irregularities, female weakness, any or all of these, it is impossible for her to be light-hearted and happy. And in the spring these feelings are very prevalent because of the torpid condition of the system after the winter. She must be cured first and, with returning health, her old-time spirits will come back.

If women will follow closely the advice and
